Business Growth Strategy Proposal

A homemade-food cloud kitchen for Okara

Prepared by: Zainab Liaqat | September 2026

1. Business Introduction

Homely Bites is a new cloud kitchen that cooks fresh, homemade-style desi food and delivers it to customers' doors. A cloud kitchen has no dining hall. It works only for orders, so the running cost is low and the whole focus stays on cooking good food and delivering it hot and on time.

Many families and working people in Okara love ghar ka khana but do not have the time to cook every day. Homely Bites solves this problem with tasty, affordable, home-style meals.

Item	Details
Business type	Cloud kitchen (delivery only), startup
Location	Okara, starting with a few nearby areas
Target customers	Busy families, office workers, and working women
Menu	Chicken biryani, white karahi, daal chawal, and a family meal box
What makes us special	Homemade taste, medium and fair prices, and delivery within 40 minutes

2. Business Objectives

Homely Bites has three clear objectives for its first three months. Each one has a number, so progress can be checked easily (the SMART method: Specific, Measurable, Achievable, Relevant, Time-bound).

#	Objective	Target
1	Orders	Month 1: 150 orders Month 2: 300 orders Month 3: 500 orders
2	Customer satisfaction	90% of orders delivered within 40 minutes Every phone call answered within 30 seconds Customer rating of 4.5 out of 5 or higher
3	Repeat customers	40% of customers order again within 3 months

Why these objectives?

- Orders grow step by step, not all at once. A new kitchen needs time to earn trust, so the target rises each month (about 5 orders a day by month 3).
- Satisfaction matters because in a small city, one happy customer tells many others. Fast calls, hot food, and on-time delivery are the things customers notice first.
- Repeat customers show that people truly like the food. It is also cheaper to keep a customer than to find a new one.

How we will measure success

Orders will be counted from WhatsApp and phone records. Delivery time will be noted for each order. Ratings will be collected by a short WhatsApp message after delivery. These numbers will be reviewed every week.

3. Marketing Mix (4Ps)

The 4Ps are the four main tools of marketing: Product, Price, Place, and Promotion. Here is how Homely Bites uses each one.

P	Our plan	Reason
Product	Chicken biryani, white karahi, daal chawal, and a family meal box (biryani + karahi + raita). All desi and homemade style.	Biryani is the most loved dish in Okara. A small menu keeps quality high, food fresh, and delivery fast.
Price	Chicken biryani Rs 280 White karahi Rs 450 Daal chawal Rs 180 Family meal box Rs 1,100 Delivery Rs 60 (free above Rs 800)	Okara is mostly a middle-income area, so medium prices keep food affordable for everyone. Prices still cover costs and leave a fair profit.
Place	Orders by WhatsApp and phone call. Delivery to a few nearby areas first, by our own riders.	WhatsApp is used daily by almost everyone. Few areas and own riders give better control of speed and hot food.
Promotion	Opening offer (free raita), posters and pamphlets, food photos and videos, word of mouth, and customer review screenshots.	Low-cost ideas that work well in a small city where people trust family and friends.

Product details

Daal chawal is the budget option for daily lunch, especially for office workers. Karahi and the family meal box are for families. The family box costs a little less than buying the dishes separately, which encourages bigger orders.

4. Digital Channels

Homely Bites will use three digital channels. Each has its own job, so the message stays clear and the effort stays small.

Channel	What we will do	Goal
WhatsApp	Take orders, share the menu, and post daily food photos on Status.	Direct orders and repeat customers
Facebook	Post short videos of biryani, white karahi, and daal chawal orders being packed. Share posts in local Okara groups.	Reach families and local groups
Instagram	Make reels that show how easy it is to order and how food arrives within 40 minutes.	Build brand and show our delivery promise

Offline support

Posters and pamphlets will be placed in nearby areas, offices, and neighborhoods. Every poster and pamphlet will show our WhatsApp number and menu, so people can order right away.

Using customer reviews

After each order, we will ask customers for feedback on WhatsApp. With permission, good reviews will be shared as screenshots on Instagram, Facebook, and WhatsApp Status. New customers trust other customers more than ads, so this builds trust at almost no cost.

Content ideas

- Hot biryani being served (close-up video)
- Family meal box on a dining table
- Behind-the-scenes: fresh cooking and clean packing
- Delivery rider arriving on time

5. Growth Strategies

Short-term strategies (first 6 months)

Strategy	How it works
Opening offer	Free raita with every order to give people a reason to try us.
Local awareness	Posters and pamphlets in nearby areas, and the menu posted on Facebook and Instagram.
Social proof	Customer review screenshots shared on Instagram, WhatsApp, and Facebook.
Loyalty offer	Customers who order 5 times in 2 months get a free daal chawal.

Long-term strategies (1 to 3 years)

Strategy	How it works
Grow the menu	Add more desi dishes (for example chicken pulao, nihari, and desserts like kheer), and later a few fast food items.
More areas, then a new city	Cover the whole of Okara with more riders, then open a second kitchen in a bigger city like Lahore.
Delivery apps and strong brand	When stable, join delivery apps (where available) and build a trusted brand with a logo and good packaging.

Growth timeline

When	What happens
Month 1	Launch, opening offer, posters, pamphlets, and first social media posts
Months 1 to 3	Collect reviews, reach 500 orders per month, and keep delivery within 40 minutes
Months 3 to 6	Loyalty offer for repeat customers and delivery to more nearby areas
Year 1	Stable orders and coverage of more areas of Okara
Years 2 to 3	Bigger menu, delivery apps, and a second kitchen in a new city

6. Conclusion

Homely Bites brings the taste of home to busy families, office workers, and working women in Okara. The plan is simple: cook a small menu of loved desi dishes, keep prices fair, take orders where people already are (WhatsApp and phone), and deliver food hot and on time.

The first goal is to grow from 150 orders in the first month to 500 orders in the third month, while keeping customers happy with a 4.5 rating and bringing 40% of them back to order again. Low-cost promotion, such as posters, food videos, and customer reviews, will help Homely Bites become known without a big budget.

In the long term, the kitchen will add more dishes, cover more of Okara, join delivery apps, and open in a new city like Lahore. By starting small and focusing on quality, Homely Bites can build a trusted name and grow step by step.
